The activity of the ancient Greek language professor A.F. Semenov after the evacuation of the Warsaw University to Rostov-on-Don is studied in the article. The author shows the shift in research topics from antiquity studies to regional studies, at times of the new government. Various aspects of his scientific activity such as research works published in Rostov-on-Don and participations in different scientific conferences are also considered. The emergence of antiquity studies in our region is closely connected with the name of Professor A.F. Semenov. The life of an old royal school scientist at times of Soviet government is shown.
